9:10 AM to 10:40 AM	AI Future(s) Worth Wanting The very term ‘artificial intelligence’ conjures possibilities both thrilling and terrifying. How might AI transform our experience of being alive, and how might traces of our humanity, in turn, shape AI? How do we ensure that AI is used in ways that respect human dignity and enrich human experience? What should we worry about more and what less? Where will AI surprise us? And how can we keep humanity at the center of the AI revolution? with... Harris Ioannou - Product Manager in Machine Learning and Cybersecurity, Kleiner Perkins VC and Open Raven Konstantinos Karachalios - Managing Director, IEEE Standards Association Yeshimabeit Milner - Executive Director, Data For Black Lives Anasyua Sengupta – Founder & Co-Director, Whose Knowledge (virtual participation) Wendell Wallach - Technology Ethicist, Yale University

	Andrew Zolli (moderator) - Vice-President, Planet, Inc.
10:40 AM to 12:00 PM	Narratives and Visions What might we want from AI? What might AI want from us? Human beings answer such questions very differently in different societies and cultures, pointing to a richer set of possibilities than many of us have considered. We'll explore what different cultures have to contribute to our shared vision of AI with some leading thinkers on the subject. with... Harshit Agrawal - AI Artist & Human Computer Interaction (HCI) Researcher Kanta Dihal - Research Fellow, Leverhulme Centre for the Future of Intelligence, University of Cambridge Aarathi Krishnan (moderator) - Research Fellow, Berkman Klein Centre and Carr Centre for Human Rights, Harvard University Jason Lewis - Director, Initiative for Indigenous Futures
